Redcliff Does Well at The School Festival

Wins Four First Prizes and Three Seconds

The Music and Dramatic festival held in Medicine Hat last Thursday and Friday in which pupils of the public schools in the Medicine Hat jurisdiction competed in singing, dancing, chorusing, recitation, and dramatic numbers was a decided success.

Redcliff public school was in the two previous years in which the Festival has been held, and acquitted itself in a most commendable fashion, and this year has again brought honor to themselves, their school, their teachers, their parents and their town.

In all Redcliff pupils were entered in 15 events, and brought home four first prizes and three seconds, which is a record of which to be justly proud.

Little Bruce Sheehy for the second year won the Maple Leaf Milling Co. Medal in the vocal solo "The Telephone" competed for by Grades 1 & 2 for Rural Town and Separate Schools. Betty Bolmer also won the Maple Leaf Milling Co. Medal for Grade 3 & 4 for Rural Town and Separate Schools in the solo "In The Fashion." Two nights of Columbus Medal was won by May Martin in the solo "Brown-Bird Singing" for grade 7 & 8. May received high praise from the adjudicator, Clifford Higgins for her recitation.

In the Town and Separate Schools choruses competing for the S. E. A. Trophy with the selections "Spring" and "Come Follow Me." The Redcliff chorus, which had won this Trophy in each of the two previous years, under the able direction of Miss McWain lost out for first place by only a very small margin. The adjudicator gave this chorus, and Miss McWain, very high, and well merited praise indeed, and awarded them the second highest marks of the Festival.

In the Grade 1 Dramatization competing for the Women's Literary Club Trophy, Redcliff took second place in "The Lion and the Lamb" under the direction of Miss Cox. Grade 4 & 5 also won second place, in the B. F. South Trophy in "The Princess and the Woodcutter" under the direction of Miss McDonald.

For the third year in succession in the Dramatization for Grades 6 & 7 and 8 Redcliff carried off the Mayor Bullivant Trophy. The selection this year was "The Trial Scene" from "The Merchant of Venice" and was directed and costumed by Miss Broadfoot. This was the most elaborate and spectacular of the dramatic events. The costumes were beautiful and the acting was particularly fine, especially when the age of the youthful is considered. The adjudicator Mr. Rae of Lethbridge gave an unstinted praise to the members of this cast, especially to the outstanding performance of Kathleen Fulton who played the role of Portia. He declared this little girl of eleven years

Jubilee Service Held at St. Ambrose Church

Last Sunday Afternoon Well Attended

St. Ambrose Church was taxed to capacity to accommodate the large crowd which assembled there for the community service of thanks giving to Almighty God for the protection accorded to the King's Majesty during the twenty-five years of his sanguinary reign.

A special order of service was prepared for the occasion and it was the same as was conducted in the cathedral church of St. Paul in London.

The service throughout was very impressive and was heartily entered into by all present. Rev. H. M. Hammett, the Vicar, gave an inspiring address on the life of his Majesty and referred to the many important incidents during his 25 year reign.

The Militia and Boy Scouts met at the Legion club rooms and headed the procession to the church where the flag was unfurled by Ralph Hargrave, leader of the Scouts, after which all filed into the church.

Military Dance Was A Great Success

Well Attended And All Had A Good Time

There was a splendid attendance at the Silver Jubilee dance in the Armory last Monday evening under the auspices of the officers and members of the local Militia.

The Armory was nicely decorated for the occasion and all entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion. During the evening the dancers were entertained by the distribution of confetti, balloons and other novelties.

Refreshments were served at midnight after which dancing was resumed and kept up until the allotted time.

The event was a pronounced success and was considered a fitting ending to the day's celebration.

JUBILEE MEETING

A meeting of the Silver Jubilee executive will be held in the Armory on Friday evening of this week at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of receiving the financial statement and completing all business in connection with the celebration.

Age to be the best actor of the day. Jack Ler as Shylock gave a splendid performance as did also Fred Bladen as the Duke, Kenneth Wilson as Antonio, John Lemming as Bassanio, Lyn Ellis as Gratiano, Eugene Rose as Nerissa and the several minor players all contributed materially to the success of the play.

"The Festival is over for another year. The work that is entailed here but the teachers know. But no doubt they will feel at least somewhat repayed when they receive the various expressions of appreciation from the parents of those children who have received such excellent training and influence as has been given them by the teachers of our school.

The King's Silver Jubilee Fittingly Observed Here and Was Great Success

Procession and Day's Program Thoroughly Enjoyed

King George V's Silver Jubilee was fittingly observed in Redcliff last Monday when one of the most successful celebrations of its kind since armistice day was held. It is seldom that more enthusiasm, interest and interest and co-operation is shown in any community undertaking than was evident on this occasion.

Despite the threatening weather in the morning the clouds lifted by noon and the day's program was successfully carried through without a hitch. The only change necessary was the postponing of the public school sports till the afternoon.

The afternoon's program started off with a procession at 1:45. This was led by Mayor Cox in an elaborate military uniform, and mounted on a fancy charger. Next came the Scout leader carrying the Union Jack, followed by the Redcliff Band and the local Militia which was augmented by about 80 officers and men from Medicine Hat, under the leadership of Captain Osgood. Decorated boats filled with the local "Dance" representing Hans Andersen and his Fairy Tales. The Dominion Glass Co. representing the British Empire with Miss Britannia surrounded by representatives from all parts of the Empire. The local Legion representing a scene on the battle field in which soldiers were behind a barricade of sand bags with one representing His Majesty King George inspecting the trenches. Mr. Geo. Bloomfield, of Medicine Hat, represented the King and the likeness was most striking. This cast got cheers of applause from every corner.

Next came decorated cars driven by W. Wyatt, R. Schmidt, F. Cangram, R. Moore, Mrs. Broadfoot, R. S. Hodge, T. Floyd, F. Britt and J. Berenson. The fire wagon, and then the school children led by June Mallard, who kept in good amuse with her comic stunts. The Boy Scouts and more school children dressed in various uniforms, some representing the Red Cross, then decorated bicycles. E. Martin put on a good comic stunt with a depression outfit from the theatre area. Bringing up the rear was "The Last Post," put on by some of the legion members. It was a fence post fastened to the rear of a decreed auto of 1910 vintage, drawn by horses. Numerous cars joined in the procession among which were a number from Medicine Hat led by Mayor Bullivant.

Arriving at the school grounds the militia fired the "God Save the King" which was followed by singing the National Anthem. Short addresses were given by Rev. H. S. Hammett and Rev. R. E. Pow in which fitting remarks were made to the character and reign of His Majesty.

A program of foot races for all ages of public school children followed, after which ice cream was handed out to all children in the grounds.

High School pupils then entertained with several of their "stunt" exercises such as human mountain and pyramid, domo, man run, blind boxing, foot races, etc. by both boys and girls for which prizes were given.

These proved most interesting and entertaining and the excitement manner in which they were put on by the pupils was an agreeable surprise to those who had not seen them perform before.

At the conclusion of the afternoon program souven'rs and more refreshments were handed out to every child on the grounds.

The winners for the procession were as follows:

Best Float 1st Dominion Glass Co. The Glass company is dividing the prize money among the young people who took part in the float.

2nd The Danish Float.

Best Decorated Car - 1st Rev. Schmidt, 2nd Wm. Wyatt, 3rd Decorated Bicycle - 1st Doreen Cooke; 2nd Jack Lesmonth.

Best National Costume - 1st Mrs. Manary as Scotch Lass; 2nd Miss Nolan as Irish Colleen; 3rd Red Cross Van by Lorain Paineau and W. Hull-rt.

St. Ambrose A. A. sale of fancy and plain articles, home cooked and afternoon tea will be held in the Parish Hall on Wednesday May 15th at 2 o'clock.

Shows Appreciation for School Program

(COMMUNICATION)

Editor Review

Dear Sir:

May I express through your columns my appreciation, which I am sure is also generally felt, of the spirit shown by the pupils of Redcliff School in the manner in which they entered into and continued through the sports last Monday.

The weather unfortunately was very disappointing, and yet apparently not discouraging.

Mr. King and his teaching staff are undoubtedly also to be commended for fostering the spirit shown by the pupils.

Yours Sincerely

Miss Russell, of Medicine Hat, spent last week-end in town the guest of Miss Doris Wyatt.

Local People Were Caught in Snow Storm

Spent The Night In Car But Nobody Hurt

The heavy snow fall last Monday night and Tuesday morning created havoc with many auto drivers who were on the road, and a few Redcliff people were among them.

Cyrus Pow left here Monday evening to take his sister to her school near Orion. They were accompanied by several other young people. On their way home they ran into the snow storm and were forced to stop on the highway and remain in the car over night. They did not get back to town till 1:30 o'clock Tuesday evening. Although chilled through, none were any the worse for their experience.

The same night Joe Podesta and Geo. Ordway had a similar experience south of Alderson where they spent the night on the highway. They were forced to walk to Alderson in the morning for help.

On their return from Taber the footballers also ran into the storm and did not arrive home till eight o'clock the following morning.

Empress Social Credit Selects Candidates

Four Names To Be Submitted To Leader Aberhart

Social Credit delegates for the provincial constituency of Empress met at Suffield last Thursday for the purpose of choosing candidates to submit to their leader, Mr. Aberhart, from whom he will choose one to represent his political party in the next election.

The four candidates selected were Adam Zeiler, Schuler farmer who lives in Medicine Hat; Ira Atkinson, of Hilda; David Leeb, of Empress, and R. Klink, of Jenner.

Mr. Aberhart will not announce his choice until after the date of the election has been set.

The nominee from Jenner, Raymond Klink is well known by a number of young people here as he attended high school in Redcliff about 15 years ago.

Mr. W. C. Smith is the present U. F. A. Member for this constituency.

There was a good attendance at the girls' social meeting held last evening for the purpose of re-organizing for the season. All present were enthusiastic over the prospects.

Mr. W. McLaws Registrar of Electors and Revising Officer for the federal constituency of Medicine Hat, will sit as a court of revision in Redcliff on June 4th and 7th, for the purpose of revising the voters list for this town, to be used at the next Dominion General election.

Those who are not already on the list and who are qualified to be on, may have their names added at this sitting.

Siam Bays Fighting Craft

Secures Speedy Motor Torpedo Boat

From Great Britain

Siam has bought from Great Britain

the world's fastest warship—

as it is claimed to be. She is one of the new motor torpedo boats,

carrying a crew of five, 20 18-inch torpedoes, two depth charges, four

Lewis guns and the last word in smoke-screen laying apparatus. On a trial run she developed a speed of just over 42 knots—rather more than 50 miles per hour. The ship will carry a crew of five, and is designed for coastal work with an average cruising range of 300 miles.

Quite a useful little craft, and Siam

is to purchase two more of them.

Of course, they are not new.

The Royal Navy had them at least three years ago. Then they were very much in the mystery-shield class,

and a great deal of the fleet's ships

way. My legs and feet were swollen, and I could not rise or get any rest

without the aid of my wife and nurses. After taking one bottle, I went about my business. I kept on taking it, and I found that I was getting on my feet. I have taken six bottles, and now

I am as well as ever. I am now 60 years of age, and everybody that knows me says I am a different man.

Little Journeys In Science

THE STRUGGLE TO LIVE

(By Gordon H. Gust, M.A.)

Every plant and animal is subjected to unfavorable conditions, and the organism must successfully struggle with these conditions in order to remain alive. No two plants or parts of plants are exposed to exactly the same living conditions and a plant

meets its particular conditions by dying, or by adapting itself to them.

The free withstands the cold by stopping its active growth, hardening its tissues and dropping its leaves.

Many herbaceous or soft-stemmed plants meet the cold by dying to the ground and withstanding all life into the root parts. Some plants combat the cold by firing outward, and providing abundance of seeds to perpetuate the kind next season.

Plants adapt themselves to light

by growing towards it; or by hanging their leaves in such a position that they catch the light. In less obvious ways they burnish their leaf surface, or greatly lengthen their leaves so as to overtop their fellows,

as do trees and vines.

The struggle for existence and adaptation to conditions are among the most significant facts in nature.

The sum of all the conditions in which a plant or an animal is placed

is called its environment, and comprises the conditions of climate,

soil, moisture, exposure to light, response to food supply and control with other plants or animals. The environment adapts itself to the environment or else it weakens and dies.

The plants that most perfectly meet the conditions in which they are placed are able to persist, and perpetuate themselves. Their offspring usually inherit the same characteristics which enabled them successfully to meet the battle of life, and the fit, that is those best adapted to their conditions, tend to survive.

Adaptation to conditions depends on the degree of variation. If the conditions are perfectly favorable, that is,

all exactly alike, they could not meet new conditions. Conditions are nearly new for every organism and they must adapt themselves to these conditions. The conditions are flexible and stable succession of plants or animals.

Man has modified plants and animals for his use. All our common plants, and very many of the original ancestors, and our long-cultivated plants have varied from their original form.

Selecting seeds from a plant

that pleases him, the plant breeder selects the seeds of the best

numbers of plants more or less selected. This process of continuously choosing the most suitable plants is called selection. A selection of similar process goes on in wild nature, and it is then known as natural selection.

Population Readjustment

Many Families Returning To Farming Occupation Throughout

Dominion

A great readjustment of population is taking place throughout Canada and the return of families back to farming occupation will, I am sure, have a beneficial effect upon unemployment. This is the opinion of Dr. W. J. Black, of Montreal, director of colonization and agriculture for the Canadian National railways.

In an interview at Winnipeg

the "Office of the company in the Western region handled close to 5,000 land acquisitions in 1924. From these acquires it has developed that 930

families from other parts of Canada,

United States and drought areas were placed upon 137,000 acres of land. Our district offices also co-operated very closely with the provincial governments under the Dominion provincial subsidized backland scheme," Dr. Black said.

In the three prairie provinces

822 relief families in addition to the above were transformed from urban centres to farms, making a total of 1,177 families returned to the primary industry.

During the last four years, our western offices located 5,887 families

on over one million acres of land.

This readjustment tends to effect a better balance between urban and rural population.

Several new settlements were commenced in the northern areas of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. These are of course of value

national and religious parent colonies

whose younger generation is anxious to found farm homes for themselves.

A Matter Of Economy

Mass Ceremony In Shanghai Cuts

Cost Of Wedding

The Chinese government delivered a telling blow at the high cost of weddings when 57 couples marched to the altar together and were married in a simple ceremony, with General Wu Feh, mayor of Shanghai, officiating.

Aimed at setting an example of economy to the nation in general, the wedding was presided over by Gen-

eralissimo Chiang Kai-

Shek's "new life" movement, the movement was devoid of all the extraneous and extravagant characteristics of traditional Chinese wedding.

To the labored strains of Mendel-son's "Wedding March" played by a Chinese brass band, the marriage couples paraded down the crimson-carpeted aisle while a crowd of 1,200 persons, largely relatives, looked on.

The couples ascended the platform

groups of four, bowed three times

before the statue of Sun Yat Sen,

"father of the republic," bowed twice before each other and one to the mayor. They then received brilliantly decorated certificates which made them man and wife.

An Important Discovery

Isolation of "Immune Bodies"

Isolation for the first time in pure crystalline form of one of the so-called "immune bodies," the little-understood substance which promotes immunity to disease, has been announced at Cornell University.

The discovery is of intense scientific interest because it may lead to advances in the study of the phenomenon of immunity, the process underlying body resistance.

The newly isolated substance is a hemagglutinin (something which causes red blood cells to stick together) extracted from the jack bean. There are large, white beans from a common fodder crop. The hemagglutinin was found by Prof. James B. Sumner and Stacy F. Howell, Ph.D., of the Medical College of Cornell at Ithaca.

The substance is a crystalline protein. It forms double wedge-shaped, colorless crystals. It acts in some unknown way on red blood corpuscles to cause their sticking.

The pure material, even when diluted 10,000,000 times, causes perceptible agglutination of dog and cat red blood cells. It has much less effect on man, where dilution is only 100 to 1,000 times. Cow and sheep blood react to it 100 times.

Agglutination is one of the tests for blood transfusions. When blood of two persons is not of the same type one causes agglutination in the other and cannot be used for transfusion.

This agglutination of cells is a process the body employs to fight certain germs. Immunity to typhoid is an illustration.

The mysterious agglutination produced by injection of the typhoid vaccine causes the typhoid germs to stick together. The belief is that when the typhoid germs are thus bunched it is easier for the white blood cells to destroy them.

Many different kinds of bacteria give rise to agglutination. Each produces its own agglutinin and each one is specific. In other words, the agglutinin obtained from one disease-producing bacterium is not a protection against some other kind of germ.

Agglutinins are only one of the "immune bodies." Another type is antitoxin, such as diphtheria, tetanus and botulinus antitoxins. A third is the lysates. These have the power of breaking up cells.

The entire class of immune bodies goes by the general name of antibodies. At present they are the keys to immunization.

But their production and use is complicated. Hence the first isolation of one of them in pure, crystalline form is important because it will enable scientists to study the chemical composition of an agglutinin and possibly to produce them artificially at some future date.

Making It Simple

Marriage And Divorce In China As Easy As Pie

Shanghai is rapidly becoming the divorce capital of the Orient.

In former days, and in the interior of China to-day, where the "feeling" influence of civilization has not yet penetrated, divorce is a social phenomenon beyond comprehension. But in the big cities along the coast, young Chinese couples now get a divorce in Shanghai with the ease with which American couples secure divorces at Reno. When the couple have "agreed to disagree" they have not even the income business of court proceedings.

Judges in China are compelled to grant divorce when both man and wife desire it. So the proceeding has been simplified and the cost is reduced to take a statement saying they wish a divorce before a lawyer, paste a government stamp on the statement, and insert an advertisement "to whom it may concern" in a newspaper. Then they can go their separate ways.

Getting married is just as simple. Many marriages are legalized by inserting an advertisement in the metropolitan press saying: "We wish to get daily rice together as man and wife from this day henceforth," and signed by the couple.

A Minor Plot

Freeman (sighing his neighbor on the way to the station one morning):—Hallo! Back from your murder trial. Have a good time?

Murderer—Very good. My wife did all of the driving.

Freeman—Splendid! And I suppose you just sat back and admired the scenery.

Murderer—All I had to do was to hold the steering wheel.

EPISODES IN THE LIVES OF THE ROYAL FAMILY

Has Definite Meaning

Privy Council Admits "O.K." As Legal Answer in Court

O.K. is O.K. Purists may shudder but the edict has gone forth. No less a body than the Privy Council has decided that "O.K." may be admitted as a legal answer in a court, and be recognized as having a definite meaning.

The Privy Council had had many strange tasks, but ruling upon the eligibility of a slang expression must surely be one of the most strange. However, faced with the problem brought to them from a lower court the members did not hesitate.

Some expressed doubts for the expression; others named it a barbarism; but all joined in passing it for common usage.

And, of course, their ruling has brought up the old, old discussion—hence came this phrase, or word, or what?

The most generally accepted theory in Great Britain is that early telegraphers, whose instruments had a sort of dial, with the letters of the alphabet marked thereon with discs, and who operated their machines by depressing these discs as required, found the letters O and K the easiest to press because they were finished. And so, when a message was finished and they wished to signal close of it, they used to flash back O.K.

Other countries have different views. The United States claim to be the country of origin of the expression. The French may be started in their fair land, and is an Anglicized version of "au quai" meaning "to the quay"—an expression used to signify the safe arrival of freight from overseas ports.

Although so much said, or perhaps because of it, the expression has countless meanings. In fact, there must be hundreds of thousands who would rather the Privy Council had given O.K. the K.O. instead of O.K.

Pat: "That was a false statement Casey expressed at the dinner last night."

Mike: "What was it?"

Pat: "He said that the swatist potatoes in Idaho are the ricciolons of things forgotten!"

For "defacing newspapers" at a public library in Birmingham, England, by writing red ink on them, Charles Lindbergh was fined $15. The prosecutor said he might have been imprisoned for two months.

Britain, too, is appalled by the mounting number of highway fatalities and proposes a thirty mile speed limit to British thirty miles will mean thirty miles. 2094

A Common Mistake

Works Of Great Writers Are Very Often Misquoted

A number of papers have recently been quoting Kipling's "Recessions" to the effect that "the tumult and the shouting dies." Kipling, however, wrote "dies", a singular verb because tumult and shouting are regarded as the same thing (and because Rudyard wanted a rhyme for "sacrifice"). A similar example is Shakespeare's "wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings." In the Bible the singular verb is often used without this excuse, for example, "Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing," the two subjects being opposite in meaning. Milton wrote: "Both death and I am food eternal." Byron referred to "What God and Turk and Time hath spared."—Toronto Star.

Sir Wilfrid Grenfell set himself "on the wrong side of 70" now but he has no intention of retiring from the Grenfell Association of Hospitals, Schools and Missions which he founded in Labrador and Newfoundland more than 40 years ago. "I am forced to curtail some of my activities," he said on arriving at New York from Europe for a visit. "But I certainly do not intend to give up the work."

FANCIFUL FABLES

Prince Never Bored People

How To British Throne Has Wide Range Of Interest

That the Prince of Wales once sang the Commemorative "Red Flag" to his own band's accompaniment, was revealed by Basil Mason in his biography, "The King's First Ambassador," published at Oxford.

A political argument was amused by the prince, to the surprise of everybody, striking up on his band, writes Mason. "How good, had I not different the performance was, I have no way of discovering, but it proved to be a master stroke of conciliation," the writer says.

The author tells of another occasion when the prince was to lay the cornerstone of the new parliament buildings in Ottawa years ago. A labor procession arranged for the same day threatened to get out of hand, but the prince took a leading part in the procession and won the marchers over.

On this same tour of Canada and other unconventional glimpses of His Royal Highness was provided when 40,000 persons saw him spring after a wounded soldier's hat and cap and put it, putting it back on the man's head himself.

"As for professional diplomacy," Mason writes, "the prince never had any ambition to master that art. Since his coming of age he has shown a free and flexible mind that has unobtrusively cast off the shackles of diplomatic conventions. The range of his interests has saved him from becoming a bore, that is, the man or woman of goodwill on earth. That and his capacity for hard work has given him at the age of 40 the look of a man eight or 10 years younger."

Rocking Chairs Are Not Seen In Modern Homes

Slowly, steadily, insistently, oblivion is engulfing one of America's most cherished institutions. Rocking chairs have just about gone out. The fashionable modern living room now has a book for expert grading of hog carcasses, but one or two battered survivors. But it's away up in the attic that the good old rockers may still be found.

What has happened? Well, who knows? People just stopped buying rocking chairs. Merchants stopped stocking them. Inspection of one of Woodward avenue's biggest furniture stores the other day developed the presence of just one rocking chair in the whole place. Every other chair of the hundreds on view stood squarely on its four feet.

One can only theorize over this amazing trend. Abolition of the rocker may be a concession to comfort. Puffed chairs need less of the modern room's restricted floor space. Also people no longer rock babies. They therefore have less need for rocking chairs.

Or does the whole matter rest even deeper? Perhaps sitting, as such, is no longer the sine qua non it was in the days of our parents and grandparents' sires. Accomplished artists have less frequently seen. The intimate association of parents and chairs isn't by any means what it once was. Or perhaps the rocker can ascribe its demise to the fact that it's such a clumsy perch for one to occupy in a bridge fight.—Detroit Saturday Night.

Brought Results

The new treasurer wrote a letter and 90 per cent. of those it arraigned to the church paid up; he wrote another letter and all but one paid. Finally he wrote one more, and the last member sent in his cheque. Shortly afterwards the pastor was invited to dinner at the man's home.

"I have had a new treasurer at the church now, haven't you?" inquired the host.

"Yes," answered the pastor, "and I am sure as to how his paragon felt towards him."

"I'll write a nice letter," remarked the host, "except that he can't spell."

"Is that so?" said the minister.

"Yes," he ought to be corrected on that," said the host, "strictly. 'Vile' spelled 'vile' with a 'v' and had two 'v's' in 'vile'."

The demand for frozen poultry in England still continues at satisfactory prices, 20,000 boxes having been exported from Canada from January 1 to March 28, 1935, a very large increase over the shipments in the corresponding period of 1934.

No matter how absent-minded we may be in other things we always remember to get some small change when we go to church.

Canada's Bacon Trade

This Product Has Now Attained A Reputation Second To None In Britain Isles

"Bringing home the bacon" would be a paradoxical term to apply to Canada's most successful bacon and pig industry, as Canadian bacon is being sent away from home in increasing quantities and is held in high regard in world markets. Canada's total exports of bacon and ham, and shoulders and sides, have increased by more than fifteen million dollars in the past three years. In 1932 they amounted to $3,761,871. In 1933 they totalled $18,002,624.

Unexcelled bacon and other pig products from the farms of the Dominion have captured the fancy of discriminating buyers on a highly competitive market, particularly during the last three years, and such an achievement under the unfavorable economic conditions which have prevailed throughout the world is indeed a feather in the hat of Canadian agriculture. Exports of Canadian bacon and hams to Britain alone in 1934 amounted to almost 120,000,000 pounds with a value of $18,000,000, and the ability of the Dominion to export the product in such million hogs gave impetus to an industry from which Canadian farmers derived an income estimated at between ninety and one hundred million dollars.

The quality of Canada's bacon and pig products has earned a reputation second to none in world markets, especially in the British Isles. This achievement is due, to a large extent, to the policy adopted by the Canadian Department of Agriculture of promoting improved production methods among its producers. Innovations such as the introduction of regulations governing the grading, marketing and sale of Canadian White-bellied cut expert grading of hog carcasses, and the importation of ultra-artificial pig stock for breeding purposes, as well as an intensive campaign to make producers realize the value of specialized pig production, have been largely responsible for the gratifying results.

Bacon grading is one of the cornerstones of the improvement policy, as it standardizes the quality, grade and appearance of the product exported. The object of bacon grading is to raise the general level of the export of product, to establish a basis of merchandising Canada's bacon as a national product, and to consolidate the Dominion's position for the future on a highly competitive market.

Soil Research

Leading Part Taken By Canada In The Important Work

In all countries soil research is the most important work in agriculture, and in this, as in other branches of science, Canada has taken a leading part. At the present time, with reference to research and experimental projects, Canada is over 100 projects ahead of any other country listed as being under way in Canada. The number of projects alone does not indicate the magnitude of the nature and amount of the work being done on soil problems. Because of the broad range of research and experimental work in the investigation of soil problems, ranging from fundamental studies of the soil itself through the whole field of soil-plant relationships to crop production, it is obviously difficult, as "Scientific Agriculture" points out, to make more than a very broad classification. To indicate something of the field of investigation covered, the projects may be grouped roughly as follows: soil survey, 10 projects; soil chemistry, 18; soil fertility, 18; plant experiments and correlated laboratory investigations; 40; soil cultivation, 4; and soil microbiology, 5 projects. It would appear that there is opportunity for considerable development in the field of fundamental laboratory investigations in all the provinces.

Has Strange Power

A human dynamo, a 20-year-old furrier, at Klondike, in Bohemia, ought to set on his electric light bulbs. When he holds a coin in his hand it glows. When he strokes it with his other hand it turns violet. He has made experiments with bulbs of different strengths. He finds that the larger the bulb the stronger the light his hand communicates. Electricians and doctors are to examine his strange power which he discovered accidentally. He cannot account for it himself.

Redcliff has the distinction of having a real Silly Jubilee baby boy. Edward McKinnon was born last Monday in this town to be here for the Jubilee celebration.

Local Boy Scouts built a big bon fire on the hill near the bank last Monday evening as part of first which were built across the Dominion from sea to sea in connection with the King's Silver Jubilee.

Despite the threatening weather Redcliff Footballers went to Taber last Monday and played a game in the rain. The game ended in a draw 1-1. The boys however reported a wet time after the game when they were entertained at a dance. Owing to the heavy snow they did not get back to Redcliff till 8 o'clock next morning.

Mr. Alex Paterson made a splendid job of the painting of the cannon in front of the school. The gun was badly in need of a polishing up and it now looks like new. It will be remembered this cannon was captured from the Germans by Canadians during the war and it was presented to Redcliff by the Dominion Government for the outstanding showing made by the citizens of the town in the purchasing of victory bonds.
